Woodstock VFW Post 5040 and Auxiliary

Post 5040 hosts Veterans Day ceremony at Post home

By Matt Klos, VFW News Editor

VFW Post 5040 provided a nice ceremony for Veterans Day, which took place in the parking lot outside the VFW hall. New for this year were permanent loudspeakers which were installed outside the VFW and at the corner of the front office. Installation was done by Charlie Mathey and Don Sword. Sid Sherwin donated money from his father's memorial donations back to the Post to buy the speaker equipment. The new speakers made it easier to hear those speaking at the podium.

Although the turn out was somewhat lower than in previous years, it was a time to publicly acknowledge what this day was about and why we were gathered there outside the Post. VFW Commander Mike Lackey presided over the ceremony.

Giving the opening prayer was VFW Chaplain Pete Lockinger. The Voice of Democracy winner from our Post, Chris Banville, was then asked to read a transcript of his winning entry. Following this, one of the three winners of the Patriot's Pen from our Post, Dana Emery, then read her winning entry. Last of the students to be reading was Graham Ellinghausen who read the poem "It Has Always Been the Soldier", author unknown.

Woodstock Mayor, Brian Sager, was invited to speak this year. Prior to the ceremony beginning, Mayor Sager mingled with the crowd and shook hands with many of the veterans that were gathered there. Mayor Sager gave a heartfelt speech of what this day was about, saying he was "humbled and honored to be standing here today, in memory and gratitude [of the veterans]".

"We celebrate today of the service of those who selflessly sacrificed," Sager went on to say. He made mention of those in our community that have served and most recently the return of D Co. 1-178 here in Woodstock. "...and we remember with certainty members of D Co. that did not return", remembering the members of D Co. that were killed while serving. He also made mention of the tragic event that took place at Ft. Hood last week.

Mayor Sager emphasized the point that Veterans Day is truly a "celebration of service provided by so few individuals", that we should honor those currently and past who have served our country proudly.

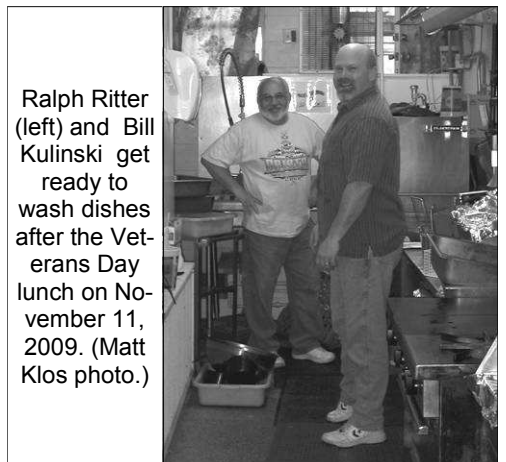

"It is a reminder to each of us as we see the flag or individuals that have served in the armed forces...that we too should follow the sacrifices made by these men and women".

Following the Mayor's speech, the VFW Chaplain gave the closing prayer. The rifle squad then fired off three rounds and taps was played by bugler Bob Schroeder.

After the ceremony, as is a tradition of our VFW, everyone was invited back into the VFW for lunch. For about the price of a normal lunch at any other restaurant, lunch included bread and butter, a salad, ham, boiled potatoes, and green beans in a light tomato sauce. Dessert was a variety of pies donated by Auxiliary members.

Servers this year was Pat Ritter and Pat Auvenshine, our cook. For a nice touch, the meal was served on glass serving plates instead of the disposable plates we sometimes use at large events. Ralph Ritter said to Pat Auvenshine, "If you serve the meal on the glass plates, I'll wash them for you." And that's what he did with the help of Bill Kulinski.

Ladies Auxiliary Report

By Nyda Fogarty, President 2009-2010

Our Auxiliary Christmas party and dinner will be held on Thursday, December 3 at 6:00 pm. It will be a potluck except the Auxiliary will furnish the meat. Please bring a dish to pass, a grab bag gift of $5.00 - $7.00 in value and some wrapped white elephants for bingo prizes.

The charter will be draped for our two departed members Pat Gaylord and Lois Freund.

If your dues are paid up to date for this year and you are present at the Christmas party, you will be eligible for our drawing of three free dues for the year.

The Veterans Day ceremony and dinner was very nice on November 11. If you haven't yet paid your dues please do so before December 31. For those of you who sent in their dues and also sent in a donation for the Auxiliary, we want to thank you and we greatly appreciate it. I also want to thank any of the ladies who donated pies for the Veterans Day dinner. We were a little short but we made it work out and I know Pat Auvenshine appreciated it.

I wish everyone a Merry Christmas and a happy and healthy New Year!

One more to thank for coating the parking lot:

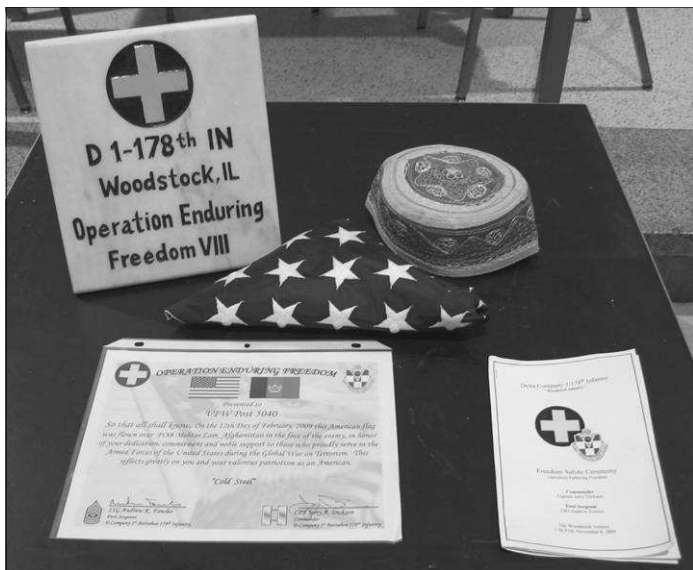

Russ Freeman

(Russ was chairing this event and I forgot to list him with the others last month. Sorry Russ!)

Delta Company returned at the end of July after a year long tour in Afghanistan. As a thank you for our support, VFW Post 5040 was presented with an engraved marble plaque, painted with company insignia, name, and campaign. A traditional Afghanistan hat and a US flag flown in Afghanistan was also given as mementoes.

The certificate reads, "Operation Enduring Freedom, Presented to VFW Post 5040. Voice of Democracy 2009 Post 5040 winning recorded essay

By Matt Klos

The Voice of Democracy program is the VFW's premier scholarship program. Students in grades 9-12 compete for more than $2.5 million in scholarship money. This year's theme was: "Does America Still Have Heroes?"

Christopher was invited to read his recorded essay at our Veterans Day ceremony. Below is the transcript.

Does America Still Have Heroes?

Does America still have heroes? Bob Dylan once said, "I think of a hero as someone who understands the degree of responsibility that comes with their freedom." But what is the definition of a hero? According to the Merriam-Webster dictionary, a hero is defined as a man or woman who has distinguished courage or ability. Knowing this definition, many might answer no. I, on the other hand, would answer with a resounding yes. Every one who has stepped up to defend, protect, or aid this nation and its people is a hero. No medal of honor is necessary.

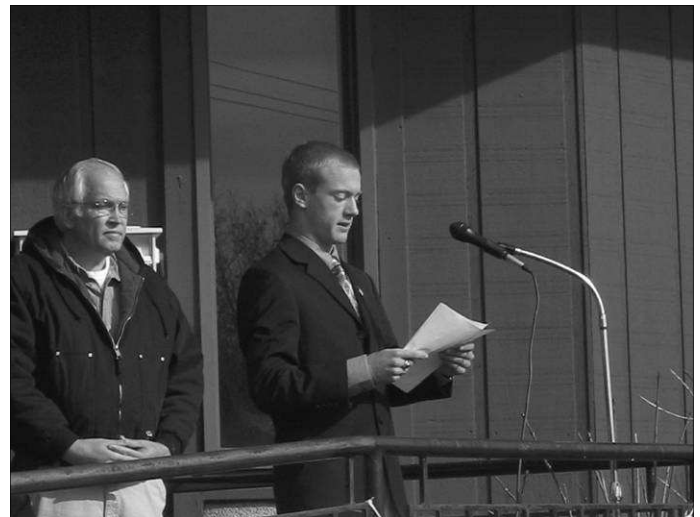

Veterans of the military are heroes. The sacrifices they made for this country protected democracy and the lives that so many Americans take for granted. Those who died gave the greatest gift they could give, and those who survived risked their lives and sacrificed their time for these same interests. Those that are still members of the military are heroes. They know that by their service others might live a better life.

Members of the military are not the only American heroes. Many men and women protect the American people as police officers and firefighters. Both careers involve courage that I confess I don't believe I have. These men and women defy natural instinct by entering situations that cause a human's body to scream for it to flee. They fight instinct unselfishly in order to save people they don't know. People they will never see again. They save people whose lives have no effect on their own, whether that person lives or dies, their lives wouldn't change. And still, these men and women endeavor to give these victims another chance at life by risking their own. The firefighters and police cannot always succeed in their missions, yet just by their effort, they are by my definition and Merriam-Webster's, heroes regardless if they manage to save a life or not.

Mothers and fathers are heroes. Raising children takes tremendous courage. It is an immense responsibility and no books on parenthood could prepare parents for what they will undertake. Parents thirst for the success of their children no matter what the cost is to them. Especially in hard economic times like these parents make so many sacrifices to make sure that their children have enough to eat, have warm enough clothes for the winter, and have supplies for school. It doesn't matter if the parent has to work an extra job on the side or work weekends. Their precious children are the focal point of their lives.

This brings us back to the question what is a hero? The answer may be different to all of us. It has to do with our perception of the word. Yes a veteran is a hero. Yes a firefighter is a hero. Yes a mother is a hero. But the list doesn't end there. If a four-year-old boy looks at his teenage brother as a hero, the brother is a hero. A high school football player giving a high five to an elementary player on a Friday night can be a hero. A person can never truly grasp how little things in life like a high five, or spending time with a little brother can be heroic. We never know whom our actions will affect, and whose lives we can make a little better. America does still have heroes. They are everywhere we look, whether we know it or not. They are our military, our parents, our emergency personnel, our friends, and our neighbors. We too can be heroes. I challenge you now to become a hero in someone's life.

Patriot's Pen 2009 Post 5040 winning written essay

By Matt Klos

Along with the Voice of Democracy winner from our Post reading his winning essay, one of the three winners of the Patriot's Pen essay contest also was invited to read their essay at the Post 5040 Veterans Day ceremony.

Dana Emery, seventh grader from Northwood Middle School, read her entry for the Patriot's Pen. The theme for this years contest was "When is the Right Time to Honor Our Military Heroes?"

The Patriot's Pen program is a scholarship program open to students in grades 6-8. Savings bonds are given as prizes for the top winning entries which vary from $1,000 to $10,000. Entries must be 300-400 words in length.

Below is the transcript that Dana read. (For those of you that are counting, there are 392 words in her essay.)

When is the Right Time to Honor Our Military Heroes?

About a month ago I went to a homeless shelter in for U.S. veterans with my mom. I wasn't sure what to expect when I arrived. I was a little scared to walk in. To my surprise everyone in the shelter was nice and welcoming. In the shelter there are veterans from the Korea, Vietnam, and Gulf Wars. All of the homeless heroes were proud to have served their country. This experience made me open up my eyes to being respectful of all of our nation's veterans each and every day. Veterans Day is a special day of remembrance and hope; but we need to remember veterans the other 364 days of the year.

The main way to honor our military heroes is celebrating them on Veterans Day. One way to do this is by participating in annual Veterans Day assemblies. Veterans come from near and far to celebrate this holiday at gatherings with us. I have participated in the amazing celebration at my school. I saw many people touched by the speeches and songs, that it moved me. When walking out of the gym I didn't see one person unsatisfied from the assembly.

Veterans Day shouldn't be the only day that you honor our nation's military heroes. Whenever you see a veteran at a parade, at a party, the VFW hall, or staying at a homeless shelter you should shake their hand and thank them for all they have done for our country. One simple ten-second handshake will remind a veteran that we appreciate them. Honor our military heroes by visiting them; relatives, veterans' hospitals, even neighbors. People enjoy talking, especially veterans; these people went overseas knowing that they may not be able to come back at all. Some were drafted so they had no choice but to go to war, but they all helped to keep this country of ours free and safe.

Wherever these veterans are now, they helped make this country what it is today. Veterans are overseas for days, weeks, months, and years, seeing things we cannot begin to imagine. They carry those good and bad experiences with them every day.

Veterans Day is a special day of remembrance and hope. It is the one-day where we can honor each and every veteran together. Let's make sure to remember them all the other 364 days as well.

The bench they stand in front of was painted by Woodstock High School students from teacher Herb Kruse's art class. The bench was first displayed on Memorial Day and then toured different locations around Woodstock. For Veterans Day, it made its final stop at the VFW and will be placed inside VFW Post 5040. Civil War statue marks 100 year anniversary by seeking repair funds

By Don Peasley
VFW News Editor 1955-2002

Woodstock remembered the 330 men who died in the Civil War when they gathered at the base of the statue in the Woodstock Square on Tuesday, November 3, 2009.

That date marked the 100th anniversary of placing of the statue on November 3, 1909. The occasion marked the start of fundraising to finance restoration of the monument such as repairing the broken anchor, replacing concrete and fencing and securing the statue atop the monument.

Chad Miller, Commander of the Woodstock Infantry Association, is leading fundraising activities and has placed collection cans at several businesses in Woodstock. The goal is to raise $10,000 in donations to make the repairs.

Sager told the gathering at the 100th anniversary that the monument is a symbol. "We use it on the letterhead. A newspaper in Woodstock was called the Sentinel. The monument is a symbol of a community both vigilant and devoted to make sure we watch over the best interests of all who live here.

"This monument represents the spirit of Woodstock. We are routinely committed to identify and support good causes, and we work to improve the quality of life here in Woodstock," Sager said.

In 2000 the community raised funds to place four marble slabs at the base of the monument with the names of the 330 county residents who died during the Civil War.

Jim Zoia and his son, Tony, will restore the monument to its original luster. Jim Zoia's grandfather Antonio Zoia was responsible for the placement of the monument 100 years ago. His grandson and great-grandson continue the Zoia Monument Company in Woodstock.

At the close of the ceremony, Mayor Sager recognized the nation's deep involvement in military battles around the world. He asked the audience to "remember those who continue to serve in lands faraway and in harm's way." He closed the ceremony with a moment of silence and prayer.

VFW Post 5040 elects new Jr. Vice Commander and Assistant Quartermaster

By Matt Klos, VFW News Editor

At the November VFW meeting, VFW Post 5040 elected a new Jr. Vice Commander, Ed Chambers. Ed will be replacing Dan Regna who was elected to the position in April of this year. It was recommended that Jr. Vice Commander Dan Regna be replaced due to other commitments and time conflicts Dan had.

The appointment of Mark Freund to Assistant Quartermaster was also made at the November meeting. Current Quartermaster, Fred Noble, has been sick with Pneumonia and it was recommended that an assistant Quartermaster be elected to help with the duties of the Quartermaster while Fred recuperates.

Thank you both, Ed and Mark, for stepping up to fill the positions in your Post.

Northwood Middle School honors Veterans Day

By Don Peasley

Students at Northwood Middle School joined a keynote speaker and a member of the National Guard in tributes to veterans during a November 10 program calling attention to "Our Time for National Pride." The theme recognizes Veterans Day, and Colton Howell, sixth grade student, led the students' tribute by asserting, "The main way to honor our military heroes is to celebrate them on Veterans Day."

Staff Sergeant David Wienke discussed completing a tour of duty in Afghanistan with the National Guard and said the American flag is a symbol of pride and our freedom. He said one tradition is to fly a flag in a combat zone and bring it home as a symbol of gratitude for the sacrifices made and support given while on active duty.

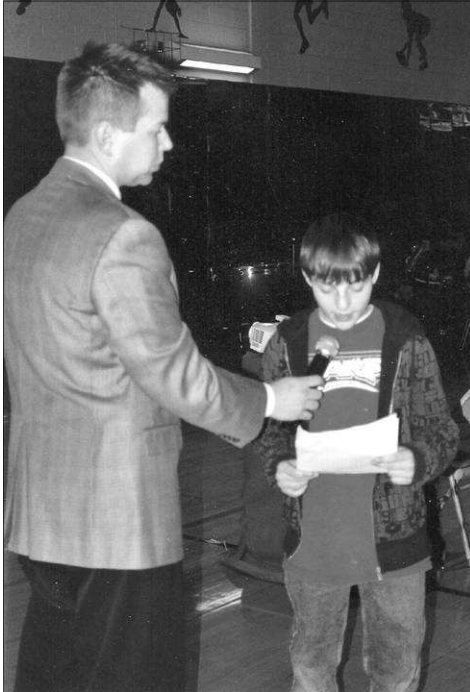

In presenting a flag to NWMS principal Jake Wakitsch, he said, "This flag on July 4, 2009 flew high above Camp Phoenix at the edge of Kabul in central Afghanistan."

"This flag was flown specifically for NWMS to serve as a reminder of those who have served and continue to serve."

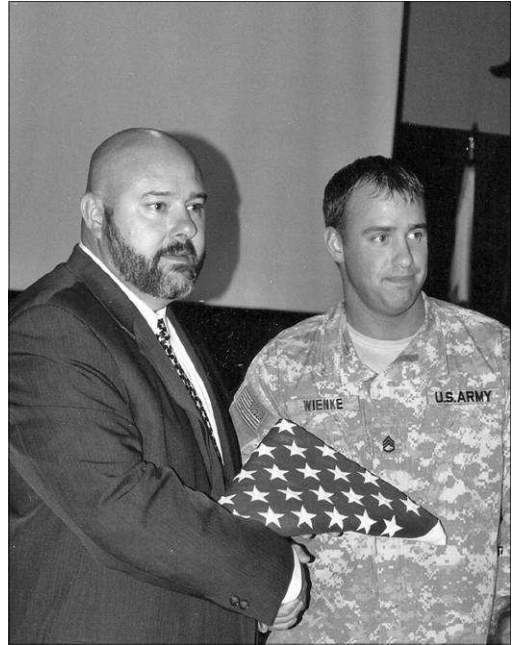

Wienke recalled he attended NWMS and Olson School before going to Woodstock High School. Wienke held his five-year-old daughter while offering his appreciation to the veterans attending. His wife Carrie is the careers exploration teacher at NWMS and served as chairman of the Veterans Day ceremony.

Nancy Phillips, daughter of a World War II veteran and wife of a retired Air Force F-15 pilot, was keynote speaker. She has two sons in the Marines and said it is her privilege to join NWMS faculty and students in honoring America's veterans.

"Veterans truly are our national pride," she asserted. "They choose to serve, protect and sacrifice for our country. We give honor, respect and gratitude on a day set aside for this purpose, each November 11."

Mrs. Nancy Phillips, daughter of a World War II veteran and mother of two active duty Marines, expresses her appreciation to honor veterans with her tribute during Northwood Middle School's program November 10. She reminded students as a nation we set aside one day - November 11 - "to give honor, respect and gratitude to all veterans, those with us today and those who have given the ultimate sacrifice." (Don Peasley photo.)

Three students were recognized during the Northwood Middle School (NWMS) Veterans Day assembly for their essays. Each was presented with an American flag. Annual turkey raffle and dinner - November 21, 2009 By Matt Klos

Our biggest fund raiser of the year, the annual turkey raffle brings in a lot of people to the Post including first time and seasonal visitors. Just like preparing your turkey dinner at home and entertaining guests, the Post dinner involves a host of volunteers to make everything run smoothly for the many that come for dinner. The final numbers aren't in, but I thought that this years attendance was down from previous years. However, the food was good, the mood jolly, and the raffle tickets were flying. Several smaller raffles for meat and turkeys were played during dinner. I even heard of several people that were really lucky this year, winning one or two prizes of meat or turkey.

Thanks to the many volunteers this year for helping to setup, serve and take down as well as those selling raffle tickets during the night. Also thanks to all our membership for supporting your Post again this year with your donations through the tickets that were sent through the mail. A big thank you to Pat Auvenshine (and all those that helped her) for the food preparation. Cooking for such a large "family" takes a lot coordination and prep time, but you did a great job this year.

The winners of the main cash prizes this year are as follows. Congratulations:

- 1st Prize, $150⁰⁰, Paul Chamberlin
- 2nd Prize, $100⁰⁰, Ron Benoy
- 3rd Prize, $50⁰⁰, Donald Meuller

Halloween fun turns the tables on Oktoberfest queen from New Glarus

By Matt Klos with contributions from Ralph Ritter

Sometimes things can get a bit wacky at the VFW. While I don't get down to the VFW that often, on meeting nights I try to catch up on news from the previous month. I hear stories and people relate information and I gather as much as I can. On Halloween I was out trick-or-treating with my own kids so I missed some of the dressed up patrons at the VFW. Several people kept asking me, "Did you see the pictures from Halloween?" I had no idea what they were talking about. Finally, I was delivered the story and the pictures to go with it.

As the story goes, Ralph and Pat Ritter, Bill and Jeanne Kulinski, and Lisa and Scott Lang rented a house in New Glarus, Wisconsin for Oktoberfest. It was a late night of celebration and Bill and Scott wouldn't let Jeanne go to bed. At 11 pm, in retaliation for their persistent bugging, Jeanne joined the rest of the group for a few more libations uptown - in her pajamas!

That's what lead to these silly photos on October 31. Jeanne dressed up as the New Glarus Oktoberfest Queen for Halloween (in pj's). Unbeknownst to Jeanne, several people heard the story of what happened and donned blond wigs (matching Jeanne's blond hair) and were "Jeanne" for the night. What made this even more silly was that the blond wig wearers didn't know that Jeanne was dressing as the New Glarus Queen. Needless to say, a good laugh was had by all.

See, we really do have a fun time at the VFW sometimes.

Will the real Jeanne please step forward? Is it (from left), Ralph "Jeanne" Ritter, Scott "Jeanne" Lang, or Mike "Jeanne" Lackey or none of the above?

From the Editor's Desk By Matt Klos, VFW News Editor

With the end of the year rapidly closing in, it is hard for me to take in that, yes, this year is almost over. Where has the time gone and what have we done this year? We all have felt the effects of the economic implosion that has gripped our country and have weathered the aftershocks throughout the year. It's been a tough one, this year. Tough as it is for some, I'm thankful for what I have been given and the family that surrounds me.

We have read in local news the stories of returning soldiers from Iraq and Afghanistan, enjoying the homecoming with friends and family. We also read with heavy hearts those that come back to grieving families that did not have the homecoming they thought they would. We ask the question of why? How much more? Will these conflicts end? What about peace on earth, good will toward men?

Maybe someday...maybe someday. But for today, we are soldiers, we are veterans, having served and continuing to serve to protect the freedoms from the evils that exist solely to terrorize and do not value human life. It is a heavy price we pay which sometimes we overlook in our daily lives.

Times may be hard this season, but remember our men and women overseas who do not have the option to be home. Think of them as you give thanks and celebrate this season. They will appreciate it.
